DOM's Deliberations

Let us approach technology with prayer, wisdom, and love for our neighbors. We need neither fear Artificial Intelligence and digital communication, nor should we just accept everything they offer. They can help us share the gospel and reach those limited by illness or distance. But we must test what we share against Scripture under the Holy Spirit's guidance. Jesus calls us to make disciples and teach obedience to Him (Matthew 28:19–20), not gather followers. Let us proclaim Christ crucified and risen with love, never softening sin and repentance to win approval.

Digital Bible resources and encouraging messages can be blessings. Still, let us ask: Are they helping us follow Jesus, or merely find quick answers? Hearing a sermon is not the same as obeying it. Whether using A.I., commentaries, or other resources, we must check their teaching against God's Word and let the Holy Spirit teach and correct us, even when understanding takes time.

Dear friends, nothing replaces a close walk with the Lord. Prayer, patient listening, and time in His Word remain essential. Jesus is the vine; we are the branches. Apart from Him, we can do nothing (John 15:5). Let us seek a deeper walk with Christ, not simply faster answers. Technology must never replace repentance, caring relationships, or attention to God. Technology can be used to simplify church administration and communication, leaving more room for personal care. Online worship can help shut-ins and others unable to attend. Yet church is a family we belong to, not just a service we watch. When someone grows quiet or distant, let us call, visit, or invite them. Everyone needs to know they are loved, remembered, and welcome among us.

A computer or smart phone cannot offer a fellow Christian's love and care. Let us notice those who are hurting, lonely, or overlooked. Caring also means protecting private information, guarding against data leaks, and checking the teachings and insights that we share. People caring about people as we follow Christ must remain at the heart of our church life.

Like radio and television before it, this new technology can serve good or evil. Online visibility is not spiritual health, sharing a viral post is not discipleship. Love, fellowship, and faithful care matter more. Hebrews 10:24–25 calls us to encourage love and good deeds and keep meeting together. May these tools draw us closer to Christ and one another. Something for us all to prayerfully ponder.

Bro. Bill
